

MISS WORLD

Competing for the title "Miss World" are eleven lovelies from all over the globe. The contest (organized by Mecca Dancing and sponsored by the "Sunday Dispatch") is being held at the Lyceum in London. Richard Todd and Glysis Johns figure out their opinion of Miss Germany.

Well stripe me if it isn't Miss France. Her name is Nicole Drouin - but, sorry, I don't know her 'phone number. It's a tough task the judges have taken on tonight - it's tougher still trying to pronounce some of the girls' names - we'll just call this lady "Miss Finland."

May Louise Flodin, otherwise known as "Miss Sweden" is next. There's extra-special enthusiasm when one of Britain representatives, Marlene Dee, makes her way onto the stage.

Time for the judge's decision - so all the beauties get together once more just in case you haven't made up your mind. Have you picked the winners? Well here come the three lovely answers: first, Miss Sweden; second, Miss Switzerland; and third, Miss Germany. To 18-year-old May Louise Flodin goes the title "Miss World."
