

AUSTRALIA RETAINS DAVIS CUP

In Adelaide, for the doubles finals of the Davis Cup, Australia's Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor meet America's Tony Trabert and Vic Seixas. Trabert serves to Sedgman who is playing his last game with McGregor before they both turn professional.

McGregor takes this one. Frank Sedgman needs a little longer to warm up than his partner. Now he serves to Trabert ...

Sedgman smashes one at Trabert's feet and it's point to Australia. Another service from Sedgman - Seixas receives.

A beautiful back-hand wins the point.

Sedgman again to Trabert.

And again a Sedgman backhand takes the point! The Australian pair are really piling it on now. The players change ends - and it's Seixas to McGregor.

A high one from McGregor sends Trabert running - he gets to it - but his shot goes out of court.

Seixas to Sedgman.

....And Trabert takes the point! Trabert collapsed after his defeat by McGregor in the singles from the intense heat, but he's right back on form today in the fight of his life. Now McGregor serves to Seixas.

Sedgman smashes - and the point's his! There's not a player to touch him close up to the net. Watch him in the next rally. McGregor serves to Seixas.

Sedgman does it again!

Match point. McGregor to Trabert.

And McGregor takes it! Australia keeps the Davis Cup! Victor and vanquished meet at the net. Now comes the official news that both Frank Sedgman (the undisputed world champion) and Ken McGregor are on their way to America to join a professional tennis troupe. The good wishes of Australia and all who love tennis go with them in their new venture.
