DAVIS CUP DOUBLES;

- 2nd Day's Play

With the temperature down to a comfortable 75 degrees, Sedgman and McGregor, Seixas and Trabert come out for what proves to be the clincher -- the all important doubles.

Sedgman and McGregor are world champions but the two Americans have teamed together only once before in big tennis.

Trabert serves to Sedgman - and starts an early rally.

McGregor's there with a certain winner.

CROWD: The crowd's on tip toes expecting super tennis.

Now Sedgman serves to Trabert.

Right at Trabert's feet and unplayable.

Sedgman to Seixas - and a beautiful backhand for the point.

Sedgman to Trabert.

And ANOTHER sizzling backhand winner.

CROWD: Seixas to McGregor.

That looks like a winner but Trabert runs like a hare -- and gets it back, but it's just out -- bad luck on a grand rally.

Seixas serves to Sedgman.

And it's Tony Trabert's point.

INVALID: He's getting an awful kick!

McGregor to Seixas.

And Sedgman makes no mistake.

McGregor to Seims again. (WIN)

Sedgman is deadly on that net.

McGregor to Trabert now. He holds match point. (SOUND)

And wins it himself?

Australia ~~now~~ retains the Davis Cup -- three rubbers to nil and only two to play.

By the time this issue reaches the theatres, Sedgman and McGregor will be professionals. Some die-hard heads may shake -- with customary selfish unfairness. No two men COULD have done more for tennis or, as great sportsmen, for Australia, than these two.
They are entitled to everything they may get in the professional field and 99 point 9 percent of all Australia will say to them --
Good luck boys -- and THANKS for all you've done!
