BRISTOL RAG-TIME

Bristol goes gay as hundreds of University students hold their annual rag day. To start the proceedings there's a mammoth procession, stretching more than a mile in length. Every one of the fifty floats was built and decorated by the students themselves.

A thirty-foot high winged horse is the entry of the veterinary students. But now the huge crowd makes its way to another part of the city where the scene is set for a battle royal. Rotten tomatoes provides the bulk of the ammunition as a lorry-load of Bristol students attack a fort held by visiting students from Southampton. Flour, soot and fish guts - anything they can lay their hands on is hurled into the fray.

A student is held captive by the Southampton enemy. So to the rescue go the Bristol boys, under their leader, Captain Hornfluffer. Students from Birmingham appeal for a truce. And finally the battle ends. The only winners anyone is certain about are two children's charities who reap all the day's profits.
