

AN TOSTAL HAIR STYLES

An Tostal has gone straight to the heads of many Dubliners. Yes, Ireland's great festival (in which she is at home to thousands of overseas visitors) includes a hairstyling competition. So all those who believe they can curl 'em up in fine fashion try out their skill.

Flowers for the fair seems to be the keynote of this style, and what better way to recognize that Spring's in the air than by saying it with flowers. Hair style specialists are keeping their eye on things and trying to make up their minds which is going to take first prize. Well, what's your choice?

Leaving the hair-styles behind for a moment, let's look in on the mannequin show. These days, in Dublin's fair city, it's not only the girls that are so pretty - they're the tops in fashion as well.

The mannequin parade is nearly over, so let's go back and have a look at what the Irish Hairstyling Association have thought up. Yes, you've guessed it. It's called "An Tostal." What do you make of the next object: animal, vegetable or mineral?

"The Jet Age" is the title of this fashion of the future. Here's an easy one. It's called "Peacock."

To round off the proceedings, the Mayoress of Dublin, watched by the Mayor, presents Miss Mabel Ross of Dublin with the An Tostal Hairstyling Competition trophy.
