

BRITISH WOOL FASHIONS

In a London hotel, the International Wool Secretariat stages a lavish display of all-British fashions, each one made entirely of wool. And you don't need an outside bank balance to buy most of them. Now for a suit knitted with Scottish yarn. It's in oatmeal wool, and was made at home by a blind girl who read the pattern from a braille book.

Here's a Rima design, a black wool jersey two-piece beach suit.

Next on the list, a yachting outfit. Remove the navy blue reefers jacket and underneath there's a red and white striped sweater to keep the sea breezes away.

Note the handsome West of England Tweed jacket of this hacking outfit. Now, from hunting let's turn to fishing. Here's just the job - a Harris Tweed jacket with green barathe trousers.

From the Michael Sherard house comes this lovely shell pleated white wool taffeta ball dress and cape. No wonder that woollen goods, designed and made in Britain, are among our most sought-after exports.
