

INTERNATIONAL EISTEDDFOD

Llangollen, a small town in North Wales, again welcomes people from many lands to its annual International Eisteddfod. From Austria comes a team of dancers and singers. During the Festival week, Llangollen's visitors - among them these Dutchmen - more than double the population of the town. About twenty different countries are represented and there's keen competition between them. But, while everyone's getting to know everyone else, a children's choir from Germany is hard at practise.

Now a gay French folk dance from Brittany.

To crown the great festival come Her Majesty the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh. Within the Eisteddfod marquee, 8,000 people sing a tribute to their royal visitors - a fitting climax to their tour of this land of song.