

MAC BAILEY TURNS RUGBY PRO

"Black Jet" MacDonald Bailey has sprung a surprise on the sporting world. He's swapped running shoes for rugger boots and has turned professional Rugby League player with Leigh, the Lancashire Club. Bailey, who is the only man ever to win the A.A.A. 100 yards and 220 yards seven times, has plenty to learn about his new profession. But he's already hard at work with his team-mates, and first reports indicate that he looks like the stuff champions are made of. Now that he's turned professional, Bailey won't be able to sprint for England ever again. But, as a winger, he's certainly got the speed to chalk up the touchdowns. So, best of luck - Mac!
