KOREA RED CROSS.

United States helicopters wait at Panmunjon in Korea to take Communist representatives on their journey of inspection of United Nations Prison Camps. There they will interview their countrymen as to the their treatment and desire for repatriation.

The United Nations Red Cross team, on the other hand, travel in communists jeeps for their visit behind the Red lines. Representatives of nine United Nations member-countries take part in this humanitarian task - a welcome sign in a world too long overshadowed by the grim wastefulness of war.
