THE VULCAN.

Still near the top of the secret list is the Vulcan Bomber, the all-British delta-wing aircraft that sets the shape of the planes of tomorrow. Powered by four Rolls Royce jet engines, the Vulcan, also known as the Avro 698, is almost as manouverable as a fighter.

The Vulcan's younger brothers, Avro 707s, escort the bomber giant. The 707 A2 (nearest camera) is the very latest of the bunch. In front of it is the 707 C, a two-seater trainer. The other two fighters are experimental and research models.

The world's first delta-wing bomber, The Vulcan, is just one of the aircraft that are keeping supremacy in the air for Britain.
