SOCCER: JAPANESE STUDENTS BEATEN.

At Southall Football Ground, East meets West as eleven Japanese students challenge a team drawn from British Universities. The Englishmen in white shirts kick off and are soon on the offensive.

The Japanese left their homeland last July, and since then they've been taking on crack teams in Germany, Sweden and Belgium. They didn't know a lot about the game when they started out, but they've certainly learnt plenty, already - including Hara Kiri tactics!

The British boys soon get on top by accurate, skillful teamwork, but star of the game is the Jap's goalkeeper, "who flung that one" - and that's not his name! Now, from a corner, Welsh International Phil Woosnam, gets it, and bangs it into the net. Brian Harvey also scored so the home team wins by two goals to nil.
