IRISH SPECIAL - KERRY V. ARMAGH.

An all-Irish football final at Croke Park draws more than eighty thousand spectators to see Kerry play Armagh. Kerry are quickly piling on the pressure and looking dangerous. Within the first minute's play, one goes over the bar from a corner - first point to Kerry.

Armagh swing play down the other end. According to the critics-experts, there's not much to choose between the teams, though Kerry, out for their seventeenth victory, have picked some of the heftiest, hulkiest players in the land and are probably the more forceful of the two.

There's a brisk skirmish down at the Armagh end and goalkeeper McMahon takes a nasty knock. Play is held up for a moment as he's carried off to receive attention.

Kerry are on the defensive now. Armagh fielding the same fifteen that defeated Roscommon, are making their first appearance in the Senior Final, and they're showing the sort of class that could keep them at the top. Watch them rip through Kerry's defence to score the first goal of the game.

At half time Armagh have six points, Kerry five. Looks like the champions will have to tighten up their defences in the second half, though they believe attack is the best means of defence.

Kerry keeps up the offensive and slowly but surely they're beginning to turn the tables - here comes another point in the bag!

Armagh attack again, trying to save the day. But they can't do much about it now. Kerry are in full cry after the championship again - and here's how they're doing it.

And it's all over bar the shouting, and there's plenty of that. For Kerry, with a total of thirteen points to Armagh's eight points, have done it again.
