WOMENS INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY.

Folkstone becomes the focal-point of world hockey as hundreds of girls, from five continents, gather for an International Tournament. Many who have journeyed far, have had to give up their jobs so that they might attend. An official welcome is given the American team by the Mayor of Folkstone. Among the sixteen teams taking part is one from Germany. Playing alongside other visitors, Austria and Belgium fight it out. The Belgians, in dark skirts, quickly prove themselves the more aggressive team, and the Austrians, fighting to the last, lose by two goals to nil.

The Swiss team, in white blouses, are soon in trouble against the attacking German forwards, and after a thrilling match, lose by one goal to nil. The could, have been goal number two! Over to another sort of Aussie test, with England, in white blouses, not faring so well as Len Hutton and his boys. They put up a great fight against the more powerful team, but can't quite make it, and lose by two goals to one.

When Wales meets South Africa, excitement runs high as the South Africans, in white blouses, attack again and again, in a tough, rough fast-moving match.

The Welsh girls are quickly overwhelmed, and there's the last goal that makes the score South Africa eight, Wales nil.
