

AUSSIES RETAIN DAVIS CUP

For the fourth year running Australia has won the Davis Cup from Americans, mainly due to the fighting play of two nineteen year olds, Ken Rosewall and Lewis Hoad. Facing Wimbledon champion, Vic Seixas, fair-headed Lewis Hoad, now serving, soon had the American in trouble in their singles duel at Melbourne.

Head's point! This is the first time he's played in a Davis Cup match. But for something to write home about, watch this perfect ace!

Now Seixas serves.

That was a bit of bad luck, for the American, though there's no doubt young Hoad is outmaneuvering him most of the time. But turning the tables for a moment, Seixas (now serving) gives his opponent the run-around.

From the far end, Hoad serves again.

Hoad takes the first two sets, 6-4, 6-2. He serves again.

That overhead smash is one of Hoad's greatest assets. Seixas serves, with Hoad at match point.

And Hoad wins! It's the American's first defeat by the young Australian. Congratulations from non-playing captain Harry Hopman to Lewis who paved the way to Australia's Davis Cup victory.
