HUGHEY - ENGLAND V. WALES.

White-shirted England kick-off against Wales at Twickenham, where a full house of 70,000 soon has its money's worth of thrills as Wales attack. Gwyn Rowlands beats three Englishmen, and over he goes. Wales 3 up.

Not since 1939 has England won this traditional battle-royal at Twickenham, but now Quinn, a new England cap, tries to put that matter right.

As Quinn goes down, Wilson snaps it up. Out to Butterfield. Ready and waiting is Ted Woodward, and the mighty fifteen stone giant barges his way through the Welsh defence to even up the score for England.

It's still three-all at half time. Watch this fine bit of English team-work as they head for the Welsh line.

And Ted Woodward has it again. Like a battering-ram, he breaks through to touch-down. A magnificent try that makes it 6-3 now in England's favour. Now its the Welshmen's turn to go on the offensive

A rough, hard game this, and one that brings 25 penalties. Here's Gwyn Rowlands taking one for Wales - and once again the scores are level. 6 points each.

Less than two minutes of play left and England attack again. Tug Wilson receives.

Clever passing finds Christopher Winn who, bursting through hurls himself over the line for the winning touch-down. England 9 points, Wales six. Spurred on by their victory, England are all set for their Twickenham tussle with the All Blacks.
