SNEYERS V. Mc CARTHY.

At Harringay, twenty two year old Sammy McCarthy from Stepney meets Jean Sneyers, the Featherweight Champion of Europe. When the British Champ, Ronnie Clayton, fell ill recently, promoter Jack Solomons put Smiling Sammy in his place to tackle the Belgian boy. It's the toughest task the young Britisher's ever taken on, for Sneyers, who beat the great Ray Fenechon for his title, is one of the cleverest fighters in the game.

McCarthy's face soon shows signs of damage, though the Belgian is still completely unmarked.

Referee Koch steps in for one of the few times in the fight. A good, clean scrap this, with both boys giving all they've got. But Sneyers misses with a wild left swing! Most of the time his punching has been right on target and Sammy's beginning to feel the effect -

The fifteenth and final round. The only hope for Smiling Sammy now is a knock-out. Sneyers is way ahead on points and he's still piling 'em up.

Sneyers rocks McCarthy with a couple of stingers. An anxious moment for his fans, but Sammy won't go down. He's taken a packet of punishment. A cut eye, a swollen nose and battered lips - but despite it all he's still game -

By sheer guts, Sammy's still on his feet, when the bell goes to end the fight- and Sneyers is the winner! No doubt about the verdict. From a ringside seat, Jack Solomons, joins in the applause. With a typical, sporting gesture, Jean Sneyers consoles McCarthy - and yes, Sammy's still smiling!..
