HIGHER QUIN: LAID TO REST.

These are the first films ever taken of the Dionne quins, the world's most famous babies: Annette, Yvonne, Marie, Emilie, and Cecile. This was twenty years ago. Today, there are only four - Emilie is dead.

One year old now, and still Dr. Bafco, their physician since birth watched over them with loving care. Already they were wealthy, for the Ontario Government had set up a trust fund for them. The years went by, and then they were three. Cameras recorded a birthday kiss. Wherever they went, whatever they did, pressmen would be there. Soon Yvonne became their leader - Emilie the mimic of the family - Marie, the quiet one - Annette, the strongest - and Cecile, the singer. And then, one day the five sisters, quite unaffected by all the publicity, celebrated their seventh birthday.

Thirteen years old now. They were growing up fast. Today death separates the sisters who were inseparable in life and their neighbours file past the bier of Emilie Dionne. Emilie lies at rest, in the little village where twenty years ago, she and her sisters were born.
