QUEEN MOTHER IN SCOTLAND.

Service of Commemoration unveiling Memorial Window to 4 Scottish Divisions.

Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, accompanied by Dr. A.N. Davidson, Chaplain to the Queen in Scotland, and Minister of Glasgow attends a Service of Commemoration at Glasgow Cathedral, preside to the unveiling of a stained glass window in memory of the Officers and men of the Four Scottish Divisions who lost their lives in both world wars.

A prayer of Intercession was offered by the Assistant Chaplain General., shortly after which the Queen Mother walks towards the window.

Now, in company, with the Minister and Lieutenant General Sir Colin Barber, she watches the unveiling. The window, (which is the work of Mr. Gordon Webster) shows the figures of St. Michael and St. Andrew flanked by the battle honours of the four divisions. It was a moving tribute to men long gone but in the words of the Anthem sung at the Service: "The souls of the righteous are in the hands of God, and there shall no torment touch them. In the sight of the unwise they seemed to die but they are in peace".

QUEEN MOTHER OPENS SCOTTISH INDUSTRIES FAIR.

And now - a lighter note. The Royal Car approaches Kelvin Hall and Her Majesty is greeted by Lord Provost Kerr together with other dignitaries of the City of Glasgow. A great welcome, in fact, all round. The occasion? - The opening of the Scottish Industries Exhibition.

The Queen Mother has always shown a great interest in Scottish industry, and pointing out that the Exhibition was not only a shop window but a door, she went on to say:

Three thousand people were present to hear these words. And then as a tribute to Scottish craftsmanship, Her Majesty was presented by Mr. R.A. Maclean, chairman of the Exhibition Council, with a two hundred year old silver teapot and salver, made in Scotland. Lord Bissland, Chairman of the Scottish Council for Development and Industry, who welcomed Her Majesty formally to the Exhibition, is next to her.

Afterwards, the Queen Mother set off on a thirty minute tour of the exhibits.

It's a memorable moment for Sadie Docherty of Motherwell, as she demonstrates this survival from the early days in industry. Business men of modern Scotland were keen to know what Her Majesty felt about the present exhibits.

Well, in her own words: "May this Exhibition bring nearer to every Scotsman his desire and reward: that by his skill and industry he will be able to enjoy his leisure and gain greater opportunity for his children."
