FOOD FAIR.

Here's a London ice-show with a difference; its the Food Fair's Frost Fair. This pageant (which pictures London when the Thames froze over ninety years ago) is just one of the attractions now at Olympia where the Food Fair is being held. A few yards away, Bulgaria adds a sweet aroma to the rich smells from the Kitchens with the perfume of attar of roses. Bulgarians also use roses to make a liqueur. Eighteen countries are represented in the kitchen exhibition. This is India's contribution.

Portugese women show how they find their way to a man's heart.

For a rare delicacy from Yugoslavia, how about Lamb Soup. Strange, exotic dishes are cooked on the various stands each day - none more exotic than those from China.

Over to Russia, 150 varieties of bread are on show, and, of course, vodka. Not forgetting its traditional partner, caviar - or at least the sturgeon who's responsible. Such are the delights to be seen and sampled at Britain's Food Fair.
