KEENAN K.O'S KELLY:

Peter Keenan of Glasgow meets Belfast's John Kelly a southpaw, at the Paisley Ice Rink in Glasgow. Keenan is seen on the offensive in a fierce bid to regain the British bantamweight title which he lost to Kelly a year ago.

Keenan slips, but is soon back in action. Kelly, who's had a bit of trouble making the weight takes the full force of a vicious right, and down he goes, but not for long. Shaken he comes back for more, and the Scots lad is only too ready to give it him. In he comes, punching hard, and often, and Kelly's in trouble.

A hard right from Kelly, shakes Keenan for a second. He's got plenty of pluck this Belfast boy, but that barrage of blows is beginning to tell.

And Kelly's down! This could be the end.

Painfully (his nose streaming blood), Kelly rises at nine. In comes Keenan for the kill, throwing crisp lefts and rights. The champion hangs on grimly. But a steam-hammer left from Keenan sends him to the canvas again.

Kelly watches the ref's fingers give the count, then valiantly he tries to struggle up again. But it's no good, the count is over, and the referee declares Peter Keenan the new British Bantam-weight champion. His His defeated opponent now says he'll fight in future as a featherweight. Keena's next objective is a duel with Bobby Sinn for the Empire title. After that, he aims to take the world crown from Robert Cohen.
