QUEEN MOTHER'S NEW YORK VISIT.

The Empire State Building (102 storeys high and the tallest building in the world) is visited by Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother during her stay in New York. From the very top, she looks across the city - in the Queen Mother's own words " a breath-taking sight".

The tall, square block on the right is the United Nations Building. Another engagement in the city takes the Queen Mother to the Canadian Club. After a visit to Washington she is to spend some time in Canada. Her Majesty now unveils a portrait of the Queen painted by Englishman Frank Slater, which was commissioned by the Canadian Club.

"It's very charming, an excellent likeness" says Her Majesty congratulating Mr. Slater.
