SCOTLAND V. HUNGARY.

Hungary, in dark shirts, kick-off against Scotland at Hampden Park. 130,000 pack the stands for the duel that's been dubbed "Scotland's Match of the Century". Rightaway the visitors are on the attack, despite a breeze in their rival's favour.

With their expected smooth efficiency, Hungary move upfield. Now Hidegkuti has a chance, but he shoots at Martin's legs. A golden opportunity thrown away. Scotland's Tommy Ring takes the ball well out of danger.

Ring to Haddock who carries on the good work. Scotland's first chance of a goal comes when Ring goes into action. Despite a tackle, his centre finds Johnstone waiting to slam it into the net. But its not a goal. Another forward was offside.

Hungary are off again. Kocsis gives the Scots defence some trouble. Then his team-mate Bozsik shoots. Haddock gets to it, but in it goes just the same. Hungary one up in the first twenty minutes, and here they go for another, though the rival defence aren't letting them through without a fight.

On to Puskas, Hungary's captain. Now to Hidegkuti, and there's goal number two!

Hungary do most of the attacking in the first half, but now Haddock swings play round, and teams with Cuning, number six.

Johnstone receives and scatters the enemy defence. Over to Ring who slams it home for Scotland's first.

2-1 now, and Scotland press for the equalizer. They're giving a good account of themselves, but again the Hungarians turn the tables. Now right-winger Sander tries a sole raid!

A fine but of work by Sander. Scotland are still two down when half-time comes around. But within seconds of resumption they're awarded a free kick. McKenzie takes it. Over to Johnstone who heads it home to make the score 3-2. Scotland could pull it off yet.

With the Hampden roar to egg him on, Heilly races for the Hungary goal. Lorant challenges and takes a tumble!

Wardhaugh snaps it up, and Goals Farago has an anxious moment.

Martin watches from the Scottish goal as McKenzie sweeps on the ball during another Scots attack. On to Tommy Ring.

Farago punches it clear, and now its Scotland who are in danger
