BARUCH -- Aarseth

Air line passengers can keep dry in the rain -- boarding and leaving their planes -- thanks to a revolutionary, new loading dock in operation at New York's Idlewild Airport. After landing and taxiing near the device, the plane's wheels are placed on cars resting on sunken tracks and then locked in place.

Next, the plane is pulled sideways on the tracks toward the terminal.

At the end of the tracks, the plane's doors are flush against the loading dock. The terminal door is opened and passengers can step off the plane into the dock. Passengers boarding the plane can also enter ~~thru~~ directly from the terminal.

A new look for passenger comfort.
