PRINCESS IN BARBADOS

PATHE NEWS: 55/14

The Governor, Sir Robert Arundel, and Lady Arundel pose with Princess Margaret in the grounds of Government House, Barbados. Then Her Royal Highness journeys to Speightstown to visit a Health Centre. The Princess, who wears a rust-red frock and a white straw hat, chats with mothers, many of whom had lost children at infancy until they attended the clinic.

The Princess stops for a word with one of the nursing staff while a proud mother looks on.

The visit to the Health Centre is one of the Princess's last engagements in Barbados. During her three-day tour, thousands of the island's people have gathered at every point on the royal route to show their affection.

Her Royal Highness boards the launch of the royal yacht Britannia in which she will continue her tour of the West Indies. With a last wave to the crowds lining the shore, Princess Margaret bids an revoir to Barbados. On board Britannia, she journeys on to the little island of Antigua.
