

INDIAN FORT

BARUCH -- Aarseth

32 The silent, ravaged ruins of a thousand year old fort survey the tiny Indian village of Chittorgarh. When it was overrun by invaders four hundred years ago, ~~Gadga~~ ^{Lohar} tribesmen left the fort -- vowing never to return until it was free.

56 Today, four thousand descendants of the liberty-loving ~~Lohar~~ ^{men} are coming back. Led by Premier Nehru, they are ending four centuries of self-imposed exile and endless wandering.

74 Passing through the arch into the sprawling, twelve-square-mile grounds, the ~~Lohar~~ ^{tribesmen} come with the assurance that like India their fort is free..

89 Oriental music provides a native background for the return of the ~~Nomadic Lohar~~ ^{wanderers}. It is a day of achievement for Premier Nehru, a day of homecoming for a proud people.
