

ROYAL WINDSOR HORSE SHOW:

Prince Charles and Princess Anne come with their parents when this year's Royal Windsor Horse Show is honoured by the visit of its Royal patron, Her Majesty the Queen.

The jumping is exciting to watch, and Princess Anne finds it hard to stay calm - in spite of daddy's firm hand.

Princess Anne's strawberry roan, pony "William" is in the show - so before he comes by, the Duke makes sure Anne is within restraining distance.

William is ten years old and although he only comes fifth in the pony competition, he gets loyal support from his mistress!

Her Majesty the Queen herself distributes the rosettes to the winning ponies and riders - making a double honour of the awards - while a certain small onlooker finds her feet again.

William gets a consoling pat from the Queen before the Royal Party leave. The end of a successful and colourful show, and of a happy family outing.
