

MRS. AMERICA

Baruch-Fitzgerald

Forty-nine of the nation's top housewives show their skill at domestic arts in the annual Mrs. America contest at Ellinor Village, Florida. Preparing dinner is one task. And it may be worth a tasty fifteen thousand dollars. The contest is all home-making. For the first time there's no bathing suit competition. The final selection is announced. And it's Mrs. Nebraska, who cooked the best dinner, kept the neatest house and has five children to boot.

Mrs. Ramona Deitemeyer, thirty-five, gets the crown -- fifteen thousand dollars in prizes -- and hubby's own salute to the new Mrs. America.
