

AMATEUR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP:

American Walker Cup player Joe Conrad receives the Amateur Golf Championship trophy from Lord Derby. Now watch America's sixth post-war victory. Conrad certainly had to earn it the hard way in a long-drawn-out tussle with Yorkshire's Alan Slater. Slater reaches the green in one at the 27th, but Conrad gets even closer.

Fifteen feet against eight - surely this one will go to the American.

But the Yorkshireman is unruffled. He puts...and it's down! Conrad can only halve the hole.

Time after time the American seems likely to draw ahead, but Slater gives him no peace. After a tiring week battling their way to the final, here are two determined golfers giving the crowd an exhibition they will long remember.

Slater keeps it up gallantly to the end, but the American wins by 3 up and 2 to play.
