LONDON HONOURS CHURCHILL:

Very rarely does the City of London honour a man by unveiling a public statue to him in his lifetime. But Sir Winston Churchill is no ordinary man, and it's a great occasion when the Corporation and their guests gather in the Guildhall for the Lord Mayor's welcome.

Lord Mayor Sir Harold Howard pulls the cord, and reveals sculptor Oscar Nemon's work, commissioned by the Corporation "in view of Sir Winston's outstanding services to this country and to the world at large". Sir Winston says:

A worthy addition to the Guildhall's many historic treasures.
