

MAN BEHIND THE HORSE SHOW.

Meet a man who can't be defeated - Colonel Michael Ansell, the one smoking the pipe. Totally blind through war injuries, he has since 1951 been the highly efficient manager of the International Horse Show. With White City manager Captain Ayres and assistant manager Mr. Gargill, Colonel Ansell arranges the jumps and obstacles for this year's Show on a special magnetised metal board.

Nothing misses these sensitive fingers. But medals alone can't solve every problem, and the meticulous Colonel, like the experienced soldier he is, knows the value of working it out on the ground.

Bad placing of a single jump, or an unsuitable surface at a vital point, could easily spoil a sporting event of world importance. But Colonel Ansell makes no mistakes.

Four years of brilliantly successful International Horse Shows proves that Colonel Michael Ansell knows his job. And the man who organises obstacles demonstrates once again that there is no obstacle which man's determination cannot overcome.
