

KING GEORGE VI AND QUEEN ELIZABETH STAKES.

It's the last day of Ascot, and the biggest race of all - the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Stakes, with over £23,000 in prize money for the lucky winner. And many famous thoroughbreds are in the running.

Hugh Lupus No.11. Phil Drake 12, Viny 13. Jockey Fred Palmer has high hopes for Phil Drake. So has Ray Johnstons for Hugh Lupus. Not much time left.

They're off! And Doug Smith on Acropolis sets the pace from the start. Phil Drake has the double crown of the Derby and the French Grand Prix, and if Acropolis is to beat him, Doug must make the most of his mount's tremendous stamina. Arctic Time, Klement, Viny are there too.

They're coming into the straight, and it's still Acropolis in the lead, with Arctic Time and Phil Drake after him. But what's the matter with the fabulous Phil Drake? He seems to have shot his belt - and now it's Acropolis, Klement, Viny and Arctic Time.

And Viny's found a gap! With jockey Roger Peincelot up, he puts on the pressure till he's neck and neck with Acropolis! Can Acropolis hold him off? No, he can't! In a magnificent photo finish, Viny wins by a nose. Peincelot's lost his cap in the excitement. So England's richest race goes to France, in spite of Phil Drake's failure. Says owner Mr. Wertheimer: "Well's be back for the St. Leger"
