CAPRI-NAPLES MARATHON SWIM:

It's nineteen nautical miles from Capri to Naples, through a choppy sea torn with currents. Five women and 13 men attempt the crossing in the world long-distance swimming championship race. No woman's ever done it, but three English girls are trying - Margaret Feather of Scarborough, Jennie James of Gloucester, and Helen Anderson of Kent.

Among the men, Alfredo Camerero of Argentina is doing well.

Jennie James is out, defeated by seasickness. Hard luck, Jennie. Camerero has a spot of nourishment, but one more falls by the wayside.

Naples is drawing near, and it looks as though Camerero will make it in record time. Yes, he has, in eight and three-quarter hours, an hour faster than it's ever been done before. And here's another world beater. The only girl who's ever completed the crossing. It's our own Margaret Feather. Nice going, Margaret and nice going Alfredo Camerero!
