

PICASSO SEES A BULLFIGHT.

Pablo Picasso, the most controversial painter in the world, calls himself a man of peace - so what's he doing going to a bull fight?

But this is a different kind of bullfight - a bloodless one, where no bulls are killed, and nobody gets hurt - if he's careful.

Otherwise it's the real thing. Star matadors from Spain, in all their finery, show the classic passes to the French audience. And next on the programme's a local amateur cowboy, who does his bull-taming the tough way.

Did we say, nobody gets hurt? Here's a chap who seems to be asking for it:

Says the bull: "There's no point in all this" Go on, git out of it!!!
