

2-012001

55/67.

U.S.A. HURRICANE HAVOC

Killing more than 40 people in her savage onslaught, Hurricane "Connie" hits the North Carolina coast. Hundred-mile-an-hour winds, heavy seas, and torrential rains send residents fleeing for their lives. Hundreds of them are without shelter, their homes splintered like matchboxes.

Record rainfall and mountainous tides swamp the Virginia coast of Norfolk. New York escapes the storm's full force, but wind and water batter the city.

Before she finishes her terrifying journey, Hurricane "Connie" does well over five million pounds' worth of damage.