SIR ANTHONY SEEKS FOR HIMSELF.

The Prime Minister is greeted by Sir William Penney, the Director at the Atomic Weapons Research Establishment at Aldermaston. This is Sir Anthony's first visit to an atomic centre, and he plans to tour all the main ones. Security says this is as far as cameras may go.

Gamma rays are no respecters of persons, so even a Premier must check that he's not radioactive when he comes out of the plant. And now over to Colchester, where Sir Anthony presents shooting trophies to the Royal Norfolk Regiment. Band Sergeant George gets the beebie prize. Perhaps he's a better shot with a trembone.

The Premier sees how the Army counters an atomic offensive. Watch where you're pointing that thing!

In this nuclear age, the Army puts everything possible below ground. That's an awful lot of spadework for someone!
