POLITICIANS V. STAGE
CRICKET MATCH

A politicians' eleven meets a stage team, including John Mills and Richard Attenborough - whose wives are there to watch - at East Grinstead. John Mills bowls to Colonel Drumley-Davenport, M.P.

Mr. Pastry can't miss! - or can he?

Colonel Davenport and Lord Hawke snatch a couple, and now Lee Gunn has a go at the Colonel who sends it towards Dickie Attenborough...

But Dickie's down! The ball has struck his face. Luckily plastic surgeon Sir Archibald McIndoe was in the crowd, and took charge. A nasty knock, but no permanent damage. New foreign secretary Mr. Harold Macmillan is knocking up a few, in spite of Rex Harrison.

Dennis Compton (what's he doing here?) despatches Lord Kilnair - formerly Sir David Maxwell-Fyfe.

Mr. Pastry believes in being prepared - and in keeping the field in order. He makes minciment of Major Lloyd George's bowling - or does he?

Now John Mills has a go....

But not for long. Hard luck! Anyway, it's beginning to rain, and the match ends in a draw. Stop press on Dickie Attenborough - he's doing fine!
