DONALDSON -- Aarseth

A fiery baseball figure -- Leo Durocher -- closes out seven and a half years as manager of the New York Giants. The sometimes controversial -- but always colorful -- skipper says he's bowing out of baseball for private business -- and a chance to settle down with his family in California.

The Polo Grounds was only the last stop on a checkered career that saw Durocher win three pennants and only last year, a world championship. After thirty years as player and manager with the Yankees, Reds, Cardinals, Dodgers and Giants, Leo Durocher reaches -- at least temporarily -- the end of the baseball trail.

Off to a dizzy start, the "Hell Drivers" take over the track at the fair grounds in Trenton, New Jersey.

Though hardly recommended for the family jalopy, this stunt has just the right bounce for the daredevil drivers.
