BOXING: BRITAIN v. AMERICA.

British amateur boxing, smarting from its Russian defeat, restores its reputation by a seven-to-three victory over the United States at Wembley. But some of the decisions cause a rumpus. Here's American J. Passos, in striped shorts, giving Brian Jones of Nottingham a lot of trouble in the lightweight event. And believe it or not, Jones wins on points!

No hard feelings, though.

British, Empire and European welterweight champion Nicky Gargano meets Walter Sabbath of Detroit. Sabbath - striped shorts, again. - puts up a good fight, but gives Nicky little real trouble.

Sabbath's hanging on, and obviously a little dazed. The referee has to part them. The bout brings a well-deserved points victory to Gargano, who can now be regarded as unofficial world champion in his amateur class.

Light-middleweight Roy Francis loses no time with U.S. sinner Frankie Davis. Look at that! Roy has the Yankee boy flat on his back after less than a minute in the ring. Davis has a reputation for one-round knock-outs - but this time he's on the receiving end!

He's out! And 20-year old Roy Francis is the hero of a victorious evening.
