

NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB BOXING.

Teddy Peckham of Bournemouth meets Jimmy Black of Trinidad in a featherweight contest at the National Sporting Club. Charles Sweeney, Christopher Seames, the Marquis of Milfred Haven, and our cameraman all wear evening dress in the tradition of this famous club which was founded by Lord Londale in 1891. One of its greatest members was the Marquess of Queensberry who formulated the rules of boxing.

The Bournemouth lad is a veteran of 150 fights, but Jimmy Black, a clerk from Pert of Spain who learned his boxing from a book, seems to have studied to some purpose. Peckham floored him for seven in the first round, but since then the coloured' boy's right on top of the fight.

Peckham is Southern Area Featherweight Champion, and Jimmy Black is contending for the Empire title - so this bout means a lot to the hookworm boxer.

Both boys are giving all they've got - Jimmy's outpointing his opponent, but Teddy's still got a few tricks up his sleeve - and he still knows how to dodge!

Jimmy Black tries hard for that K.O., but the Englishman stays on his feet. That's about all he can do, though.

There's the bell - and Jimmy's won on points. Anyone want to borrow that book of his?
