

SANTA CLAUS ARRIVES.

What's everybody looking at? Surely it can't be Father Christmas, so early? Anyhow, he's supposed to come down the chimney, not from outside! But believe it or not, it is Father Christmas - so perhaps this Edinburgh store is centrally heated, and he couldn't find any suitable chimneys.

The kids don't mind whether he comes by parachute or pushbike - just so long as he turns up. After all, it isn't the reindeers that matter - it's what he's got in his sack! And talking of sacks, where is it? Must be inside somewhere - and he has plenty of volunteers to help him find it. Welcome back, Santa!

(Released Thursday, 17th November, 1955)

SANTA CLAUS ARRIVES

29 What's everybody looking at? Surely it can't be Father Christmas, so easily? Anyhow, he's supposed to come ~~ging~~<sup>/down</sup> the chimney, not the outside! But believe it or not, it is Father Christmas - so perhaps this Edinburgh store is centrally heated, and he couldn't find any suitable chimneys.

MR UP

58 The kids don't mind whether he comes by parachute or pushbike - just as long as he turns up. After all, it isn't the reindeers that matter - it's what he's got in his sack! And talking of sacks, where is it? Must be inside somewhere - and ~~lots~~<sup>he/has</sup> plenty of volunteers to help him find it. Welcome back, Santa!