

2-048001

56/2

TIP-AND-RUN FROGMAN.

Off the California coast, U.S. Navy frogmen tumble into the water for a tip-and-run raid during an amphibious exercise. There are underwater charges to be placed - but they have to make sure, literally, that the coast is clear.

For these lads tackling a sentry is all in the day's work, but it's no easy task, when you're wearing frogman equipment.

The job is done, and now for one of the trickiest moments - getting back into the launch.

And there she blows! America's underwater soldiers have accomplished their mission, and the way is clear for the infantry assault.