FLOODS-

Weist-Fitzgerald.

Torrents of rain lash Northern California, and for the second time in three weeks, the Feather River threatens to sweep away levees protecting riverside cities. Bridges go out in the rushing maelstrom, and again the Yuba City area feels the menace of disaster, Homes-- reoccupied after the last flood.-- are abandoned once more. Hastily built dikes are not safe against millions of tons of churning water. Hundreds of persons are evacuated by every means available in the Yuba City-Marysville area. While they flee from the rising water, Army flood fighters pour in for a last-ditch battle to save a city.
