1000000000
BARUCH-FITZGERALD

President Eisenhower returns to the golf links while vacationing at Thomasville, Ga., to play his first game since his heart attack last September.

Using an electric "golfmobile", as he often did before his illness, the President rides while he plays a cautious nine-hole match. He announces he's been looking forward to it -- but adds he's a little frightened of his strokes and himself. However, his doctor reports Ike in very good condition after his first golf game, and his putting hasn't suffered - too much.
