HE-MAN HAIR DO'S

There's a barber's competition in the shade of Blackpool Tower
Where the men are more important than the girls;
No longer is it fashionable to have "short back and sides"-
Today, a chop must concentrate on curls.

These ladies must be stowaways - they've no right to invade
A province so predominantly male;
Such flippancy's outrageous - get rid of them at once!...

Where'd they get 'em ducks? Did they buy 'em at a sale?

From London, York and Manchester they've come to do their stuff -
From Bradford, Bristol, Birmingham and Leeds;
To demonstrate the hair-do a chop can't do without
to give him all the confidence he needs;
To prove that masculine coiffure's a great and growing art
Indispensable to every man and boy -
And the barber's shop, which used to be a commonplace affair,
Becomes a temple of artistic styles and jay!

There's a barber's competition in the shade of Blackpool Tower -
Our cameraman was sober when he shot it;
He swears it really happened, and that anybody's hair
Can look like this - provided that he's got it!
