Max Resch vs Alex Buxton (rough Cut)

5,000 boxing fans intruded a thrilling fight between the British fighter Buxton and the Suanbian K.O. matador Max Resch (Stuttgart-Hamburg)

It was the 25th professional fight of the talented young German boxer who has won 20 of them by K.O. - and it was to be the first defeat in his career. Young Resch was not a match for the experienced ring-fax Buxton who gave a masterly demonstration of hard in-fighting and ring tactics Resch awaited his chance to land one of his fatal "hammer-blows", but did not make use of his dangerous right. The 5th round was the decisive one, and it seemed as if Resch would succeed. But Buxton "took it". He fought with outlasting energy landing hard blows.

In the 10th and last round Resch - who had collected a lead on points - played out his last triumphard, but ran into a full right of the always dangerous Buxton. Resch goes down like a sack - tries to get up at 6 but then crumples up completely. Down and out! Trainer Otto Schmitt wrapped up his promising pupil in a black blanket. More to come - but Resch will now proceed on the slower path!
