

MANCHESTER CITY v. EVERTON.

Manchester City (in dark shirts) kick off against Everton at Maine Road. Everton goalie O'Neill finds himself in the game almost at once, but the ball's soon back at the Manchester end. But Bert Trautmann stops Fielding's header and throws it clear.

Everton try again - and once more Trautmann saves the situation.

But the Everton attackers are in brilliant form. Time and again they threaten the goal. Only Trautmann's heroic efforts keep the ball out of the net. But there's a limit to what even the finest goalkeeper can do, and Jimmy Harris finally beats him!

So at half time it's Manchester City nil, Everton one, and City will have to pull something out of the bag pretty quick. And miraculously, they do! In the second half, a transformed Manchester gives the visitors a taste of their own medicine. Now it's the Everton goal under fire.

A free kick for Manchester. Skipper Roy Paul takes it, and little Joe Hayes heads it in!

One all. Can Everton regain their first-half form? Here's Brian Harris dribbling down the wing - he passes - but City's left back Little is there, and the attack fails.

Everton try again, but this time it's Ewing who stops the rush. The ball goes loose and is passed back to Bert Trautmann, who clears upfield.

Now City have completely won the initiative. Roy Clark centres - Bobby Johnstone jumps - and that's the victory goal!
