MARILYN MONROE

Weist-Fitzgerald

X Marilyn Monroe and Warner Brothers Pictures announce at a Hollywood press conference that they're joining forces. The world's most famous blonde will produce her film "The Sleeping Prince" for Warner Brothers. Executive Producer Jack L. Warner gives Marilyn the key to the studio, while other stars, including James Stewart, welcome her to the company's headquarters. Stewart is starring in another Warner Brothers film. He portrays Charles Lindbergh in "The Spirit of St. Louis."

X Marilyn and Sir Laurence Olivier will co-star in "The Sleeping Prince" -- a former London stage hit now slated to become a new movie in color for the fascinating Marilyn Monroe.
