

CANADA'S WEDDING

Donaldson-Fitzgerald

Six brides are ready for their wedding at Blenheim, Canada, where the four Dorssers daughters and the ^{two} _^ Dorssers sons are getting married together. It's their father's idea. He's quoted as saying he's busy farming and can't go to weddings all Spring.

At St. Mary's Catholic Church, the little town's biggest wedding begins with the father leading his four daughters to the altar: Grada -- Dora -- Christina and Wilhelmina.

The brides of the Dorssers brothers -- Andrew and Cornelius -- are there, too. And -- just as father Dorssers so neatly planned -- the twelve-ring ceremony is accomplished without a slip.

When it's all over, Grada is married to Bernard; Dora to William; Christina to Jack; Wilhelmina to Gerard; Andrew to Anne, and Cornelius to Jean. All the happy newlyweds came from Holland -- as did father Dorssers, who now can get back to the farm.
