

MOSS DOES IT AGAIN.

It's the start of the race of a thousand corners - the Monte Carlo Grand Prix, two hundred miles of twisting streets, and sudden hills. It's never been won by a British driver yet, but Stirling Moss, in Maserati No.28, is out to put that right. He takes the lead from the start. He's got another reason for wanting to win - if he does, it will be his first Continental Grand Prix victory.

Fangio (Ferrari No.20) and Behra (Maserati No.30) are on his heels, but Moss holds his lead. Later Fangio, has trouble, and takes over Peter Collins' Ferrari No.26; but by now Stirling Moss has lapped everybody else and is half a minute ahead of world champion Fangio. He streaks over the line, the first-ever British winner, with Fangio second and Jean Behra third.

Stirling's next ambition - to win a Grand Prix in a British car. And he adds: "I'd still like to try a Vauxhall"
