

THE SECOND TEST MATCH:

The second Test, the last innings, and England need 372 to win - with a day and a half to get it in. Quite a tall order. Here's Miller bowling to Cowdrey, who scores a single. Richardson and Gravamey have been dismissed, and now it's Watson at the other end.

Miller to Watson.

And Watson's bowled - 87 for 3. We'll have to do better than this.

Now it's Peter May doing his best to stop the rot. England's hopes rise again, for he seems to have the measure of the Aussie bowling.

Benaud to Cowdrey.

And Cowdrey's l.b.w. Now it's 91 for 4, and May's really got his work cut out. The field is packed very close, but time and again he manages to slip through.

The new ball, and Archer bowling to Bailey.

Bailey smacks him to the boundary for four.

Archer to Bailey again.

And there goes Bailey - 142 for 5. He's succeeded by Evans, who starts off with a lucky escape.

Archer bowling to Peter May, and watch this for a neat piece of fielding.

May's making a gallant stand, and Evans is holding his end up well - so all hope isn't dead yet. But it's very slim indeed, and when Miller has Evans caught by Langley for seven, it's practically disappeared.

175 for 6. And now comes disaster - Langley catches May five runs later.

Laker follows - but he's dismissed for four. England's tail is collapsing fast, and Australia's on top of the world.

Wardle goes for a duck. Truman snatches a couple, but Archer soon deals with him - and Australia have won by 185 runs. One up and three to go - a real challenge for England!
